Chapter 1 by Caleb Jones

Once upon a time, in a little village near Brussels called Tervuren, there was a big park and in the middle of the park there was an enormous wood and in that wood, there was a dark and gloomy lake and in that lake there lived a Monster called rufise. rufise had eaten all the other monsters who used to live in the lake and all the children who used to go near the side of the lake and for that reason, he had an enormous round tummy.
It was so big that when the monster moved, it scraped along the bottom of the lake and so that he could move better, he had to hold on to the branches of the trees around the lake and they were all broken and almost touching the water.
The lake of monsters rufise the r... was hungry; there was no more to eat; he had eaten all the monsters and the children didn't go near the side of the lake anymore because they were scared.
Until one day, near the lake, a group of children were playing football and thought: I could eat that! So he went to the corner, his tummy scraping along the ground and holding on to the branches of the trees and with one gulp in one mouthful he swallowed the ball.

Trees and branches of the lake So the monsters and the children who were inside his tummy began to play a game of football and one monster kicked the ball so hard that it blew up.
All the air inside the ball began to escape and the monster's tummy began to get bigger and bigger until it too exploded.
So all the monsters came out of the monster's tummy and all the children went running home to tell their parents "we're here at last" and to tell them everything that had happened.
Monstruo's tummy was not big and round anymore and it didn't touch the ground and he was thin.
He could walk without grabbing on to the branches of the trees, but most of all he had friends.
There were more monsters in the lake and he could play with them.
So rufise thought:
"I'm not going to eat any more monsters or children".
Little monster with big tail And from that moment on, rufise only ate fruit from the trees near the lake and when children went near the side of the lake he gave them rides on his enormous tail.

And they all live happily ever after
And now

NOW, SLEEP!
